Content

At our basic core, we are life-energy. We each are actually unique manifestation of the Universal Life-Energy. What would happen if we looked at working with clients who have depression at connecting their negative life experience with their life-energy?

Dr. John Banmen, psychologist and family therapist, will explain the Satir Model's concept of life energy and demonstrate with a client he has never seen before on how the life-energy approach of understanding can help the depressed client gain new insights and energy to start his/her road of recovery from long term depression. In most cases, depression is a dysfunctional solution to a serious problem related to being disconnected to one's life-energy.

Come and experience how the Satir Model works at the energy level with people having depression.
